Museum Policies in Europe 1990 - 2010: Negotiating professional and political utopia

In a Europe realizing the impact of globalization and human mass migration, the role of the national museums is put to debate. Studies from five different countries on how nations (and EU) develop policy in order to deploy national museums in redefinition of the nation state will be presented at this conference, establishing an arena in which museologists and cultural politicians get the chance to meet and debate a matter deeply important to everybody concerned with cultural identity uses.

There is no conference fee, but please let us know which dates you plan to attend (free lunch will be served the last two days).

Contact Lill Eilertsen for participation on the following e-mail address:
